THE CROPS.

Crop weather during the week has been ideal and with a few weeks more of the same kind the western farmer's heart will be gladdened with a good average yield from the soil. A careful observer informed the Bulletin yesterday that three weeks of such weather would see spring wheat ready for the binder in this part of the country. Hereabouts the average under wheat is not large, the bulk of the grain being oats and barley. The harvest is accounted for largely by the backward spring, which prevented seeding until many farmers considered it too late to chance a crop. As conditions have been since spring really broke, however, those who took the chance have every prospect of reaping a good reward. In some districts the growth of straw is rather longer than desirable owing to the plentifulness of rainfall, but the average is very satisfactory. Little grain is lodged. A new feature in the oat market this fall will be the crop in Southern Alberta. Previously little of this kind of grain has been seen there for the market, but owing to the damage to late wheat by the winter and late spring many fields were reseeded to oats. These are reported to be coming along well and will likely put a considerable quantity on the market. The prospect for oat demand, however, is very good. Beside the normal increase in demand from settlement and from the growth of towns and cities a very large amount of railway construction will be under way throughout the province next summer and the camps will require a large amount of horse feed of all kinds. This should also help out the market for hay, which promises to be a large crop.

THE TAX RATE.

A tax rate of 17 1/2 mills is declared necessary to meet the city's expenditures for the year. The rate is high, generally and decidedly higher than it should be allowed to become while our assessment continues on the present basis. A high assessment is for many reasons preferable to a low tax rate levied on it; but a high assessment and a high tax rate are the upper and neither millionaires that grind the taxpayer. And the danger of a higher assessment is that the tax rate shows a persistent intention to climb, which can be thwarted only by eternal vigilance of the council and by patience on the part of the public who want improvements.

For the present season of quiet there is nothing for it but to pay the rate. Our debts must be paid. But future councils must do well to not let it over again. How it can be avoided we will be in better position to consider after the matter is discussed in council and the information regarding the increase in expenditures brought out. There would seem, however, to be a splendid chance for public service if the aldermen would see into the taxation problem fully during the next few months in an effort to pave the way for a more satisfactory showing in the future. One thing is clear—no, cannot stand in line of three mills per annum per year while maintaining the full value assessment principle. Another point equally clear is that though much work has been done this year which probably makes itself felt in the higher rate, much work and of similar character must also be done next year and each year for many. If the increase in the rate is due in any large degree in the volume of this work done during the year we seem to have the alternative of either increasing the assessment, postponing future work of similar character, or of readjusting the basis on which the city's share of the cost is determined. It is worth looking into the question of whether or not the city assumes an undue proportion of the cost of local improvements.

Much might be done too to better control the amount of the present expenditure if the estimates for the year were presented before the construction season begins, and were rigidly adhered to after being ratified by council.

It would seem a wise arrangement to fix the current expenditures estimates for a year in view of the current revenue of the preceding year, adding only such margin as normal increase in assessment is likely to bring in. It is such were done the council would be the masters of the tax rate and to related petitions for expenditure from the revenue council reply: "No funds available." To insist to do this and to readily permit excess of expenditure over estimates is simply to give reign to the tax rate, which is ever and always looking for a chance to run away with us.

"VINDICATING CANADIAN LOYALTY."

Sir Frederick Borden struck the right chord at the Imperial Defence Committee in saying that the patriotism and loyalty of Canada to the Empire does not depend upon the fiscal policy of Great Britain. There was need of this being said, and officially, and said in London. Through the high tariff propaganda of the British opposition there is constant effort to the effect that the overseas Dominions expect Britain to bar the products of the world from her markets for their benefit. Our attachment to the Empire is not expected the waning of Imperial sentiment in these "colonies," and its final extinction is not far off, probably soon. So far as Canada is concerned no greater libel was ever hurled at the honor of a people. Our attachment to the Empire did not originate in the market place and does not depend on "what there is in it" for its life and strength. If such were the case we should long have thrown in our lot with the Great Republic to the south and secured free trade for our farm products in one of the richest and most exclusive markets of the world. We have stood by Britain regardless of the safety of the pound and peace consideration and indeed to do so in future, notwithstanding the lying imputations of the Harmsworths of England, we have a set of mercantile. Perhaps, however, Canada should not be too freely launched against these distant observers, for their observations are taken mostly through the columns of some Canadian journals which presumably construe their own selfish motives to be those of their countrymen. Canada is not bugging the British people to tax their food for our enrichment, certain of our noisiest journals and fustian journalists to the contrary. ## WAR IN THE CAMP.

The honor traditional among a certain unpoplar element of the community does not seem to dominate some of the grain dealers of Calgary in the minds of their countrymen. According to the News of this city—

"The methods of organization and plan for conducting the Calgary Grain Exchange, Limited, has created a great deal of dissatisfaction among the grain users of this city and of the province generally."

The question of a grain exchange has been before the grain growers and the board of trade and other bodies of this city for some time and all have done all within their power to boost the project under the impression that it would be an association where equity would reign and where there would be no unfair domination by the powerful few.

"Some time ago the Calgary Grain Exchange, Limited, secured a charter. The company was composed of Messrs. L. P. Strong, of the Alberta Pacific Elevator Co., John McFarland, of the Alberta Elevator Co., A. R. Campbell, of the Pacific Elevator Co., and three legal gentlemen. The incorporation was under the laws of the province of Alberta."

"That was all very well so far as it went, but now the very same persons have organized another company which they call the Calgary Grain Exchange, and for which they got a charter from the Dominion government. The personnel is the same, but there is one word difference in the title. Next they claim to have purchased the Calgary Grain Exchange, Limited, and all its rights and to have absorbed the latter all in one big corporation. They claim to have given the latter $30,000 for its privileges and of this amount $20,000 is quoted as stock."

"This is the allegation of the outsiders of the entire grain exchange business in this centre and to exclude all others from privileges. It is believed to be a cunningly prepared plan to obtain a monopoly."

The new corporation has all ranged to keep the majority of the share in the new company, which will give them full control of the situation for all time to come."

"The whole situation means that the old company started with nothing but a charter from the provincial government and that they are holding up the other grain users for $27,500, which is the amount of the stock they wish to sell, before they can share any of the privileges. The charter would not likely cost more than $500. The incorporation for putting it all secured itself $28,400 in stock."

FOLEY'S PREMIER SODAS

"The flour and hard used in any soda may be good, but that is not all that is wanted in a satisfying bicarbonate—it is not all that Foley's Soda gives. Good flavor is essential. In securing the good flavor of Foley's Soda we recognize the importance of a perfectly ripening yeast. We take no chances with our yeast. We could buy it from outside makers at less cost, but we do not do so—all the yeast used in Foley's Soda is made in our own factory and by securing perfect working of that yeast, get the delightful flavor for which Foley's Soda is famous. Never sour, never flat or party—always sweet, crisp and good all the way through."

HARRY V. RADFORD'S FIRST BEAR

New York Literary Luminary the Victim of a Practical Joke Which Has Convinced the North With Laughter—How Captain Barber of the Northland Sun Gave Enterprising Men Opportunity to Use His Rifle on Big Game.

The North is convulsed with laughter. The paragon started at Grand Rapids, and with the assistance of the editor of the Northland Sun, extended north, west and east—everywhere above the 50th parallel of latitude. When the North smiles the expression of merriment is so expansive as to be painful to itself. At the present moment a roar of laughter is echoing through the vault of heaven. In fact, the North is laughing to such an extent that it is drawing to itself in a painful endeavor to repress the exuberance of its mirth.

THE "BEAR" RADFORD "KILLED."

The cause for all this merriment in Harry Vincent Radford, of New York, who seeks to engrave his name on the annals of fame as an intrepid explorer, student of the habits and habits of the wild beast, and author of various and authentic historical volumes concerning the top half of the Province of Alberta. Such an ambition as this may be laudable—the North does not know and does not care—but when a writer expresses a most unbecomingly desire and inevitable ambition to bore there being no known means in this country of artificially producing sufficient snow between the Provincial Capital and the Medicine River to allow of such a snowmobile trip as proposed. But when Mr. Radford's advice notices gave it out that he intended to provision himself solely with matted milk and chocolate, even Edmonton smiled. As for the North it smiled a preliminary roar of laughter almost as loud as that which is now ringing the country around. The substitution, as such, of chocolate for the three B's—biscuits, bacon and beans—was just a funny. As one man said, the North—just only at this demonstration of ultimate simplicity, but there was not a man who ever expected to have the mischievous pleasure of gazing into the face and measuring the stature of the courageous individual, who, to science's sake, proposed to use the efficacy of chocolate as a guide.

He arrives in Edmonton. However, in the course of time, Harry Vincent Radford reached the Gateway of the North. He unloaded himself and his chocolate at the C. P. R. station at Strathcona, on one of the few fine days in April. He permitted himself to be interviewed by the newspapers, and then for the next three months set about getting himself in shape for his three-year sojourn, slipping chocolate in the North, while the wild beast presented themselves before his tent to have their brains and habits studied.

Three weeks ago, Mr. Radford arrived at Athabasca Landing, and he boarded the Northland Sun, to be carried on the first stage of his trip to Grand Rapids, 140 miles below Athabasca Landing, on the Athabasca River. It was at Grand Rapids where the richest joke of the last decade was perpetrated, with Mr. Radford as the subject, and the whole North country looking on.

Mr. Radford, between Edmonton and Grand Rapids, frequently expressed a consuming desire to shoot a bear. The North country is nothing but hospitable, and a man's desire, expressed and unexpressed, met with a ready fulfillment in any country known to Mark Twain or George Aik.

The captain of the Northland Sun, J. D. A. Barker, and, like every other man in the North, the humorist, even in his sticking out like the proverbial swag on a nose. In the furtherance of the expression of his patriotic ambition Mr. Radford, the first day aboard the steamer, invited Captain Barber to his stateroom to possibly show him the brand of Scotch whisky which he had provided himself with, and with which he hoped to begin his game. Captain Barber is a gentleman and considerate, even to the point of indulgence, of his passengers. The following day Captain Barber conceived the idea of affording Mr. Radford an opportunity of testing his 30.06. He thereupon made a framework and with an oil drum rigged up a dummy bear, which, to say the least, was a very clever work of art. When the steamer got up to the head of Grand Rapids in the evening, the captain carried the bear to a point on the river bank, extremely difficult of access, and from its left hand side a line along a ledge of rock took to the boat. During these operations the crew and passengers, including Barber, remained at Athabasca, with the exception of Mr. Radford, who took into the captain's cabin.

When every detail was arranged the captain sat himself down in the forward cabin and entered into an animated conversation with Bishop Stricker and Mr. Radford. A few moments later one of the members of the crew ran in and breathlessly called upon the captain to provide him with some ammunition.

"What do you want ammunition for," asked the captain.

"To shoot a bear, there's one down the river."

With a cry that put the fear of an evil spirit into the natives in their regard on Hetchichew, Harry Vincent Radford rose from his chair with the alacrity of a cat, and, as anticipated by the hostless job, "Let me shoot it, I want to shoot it."

"No, I won't," said the man who had discovered the bear; but Mr. Radford was hop, step and jumping to his stateroom. He grabbed his rifle, vaulted over the steamer's rail, and under the direction of another member of the crew, raced along the bank to the point where it was necessary for him to take out of the ledge of rock. He made the grade, and a moment later spotted the bear.

"Bang!" He had fired his first shot, the bear never moved, and the passengers hanging over the rail holding their breaths to restrain a heart of laughter, which might have spoiled the sport. Again Mr. Radford's rifle spoke, and the bear lay on its back, the man in the pilot house having been firing attached to the ship's engine, and the engine's brain.

Third shot echoed through the valley. The bear never moved, and the passengers hanging over the rail holding their breaths to restrain a heart of laughter, which might have spoiled the sport. Again Mr. Radford's rifle spoke, and the bear lay on its back, the man in the pilot house having been firing attached to the ship's engine, and the engine's brain.

Mr. Radford then proceeded to the point of the first shot, and he had successfully stalked, and shot the North country started to laugh, and has been laughing ever since.

HIGH COMMISSIONER'S VISIT.

Winnipeg, Pleated Strathcona is to visit City in August.

Winnipeg, July 30.—The announcement that Lord Strathcona has definitely decided to attend the Winnipeg meeting of the British Association in August has been received here with genuine pleasure.

Lord Strathcona will next year be 90 years of age. His remarkable career in the service of the Hudson's Bay Company is a record of Canadian history. In Winnipeg his 40th birthday was celebrated in 1898, and it was then that he was appointed a member of the Dominion Council. He was also a member of the first executive council of the Territories, which was formed in 1870. The year 1871 also saw Donald A. Smith, a member of the House of Commons at Ottawa. He was elected for the constituency of Selkirk, which he represented until 1880, when he suffered defeat at a by-election. He represented the constituency of Selkirk at the general election of 1887, in which year he was returned for Montreal West. He held this seat until 1906, serving during the last days of the Howell ministry as a delegate to the Manitoba government of the school question.

In April, 1908, he was appointed high commissioner of Canada at London, and retired from political life. The following year he was created a baron with the title of Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal of Glenora. During the past thirteen years he has become one of the best known men of the British Isles and his versatile figure has constantly been seen at prominent gatherings in the old country. At Knebworth House, Hertfordshire, and at his other seat in the United Kingdom he has, as a Canadian, been a frequent guest of the British aristocracy, and he has been a frequent guest of the British aristocracy, and he has been a frequent guest of the British aristocracy.

He is a man of culture, a patron of art and a member of numerous societies.

What Sunshine Furnace does

Sunshine Furnace is designed and constructed to heat a house, church school or any other building more satisfactorily than any other known furnace or other style of heating apparatus.

It does this more readily than the best of boilers because, as soon as fire is started in Sunshine Furnace, the heated air can be obtained for the room.

It does this better than other furnaces because, being made from exclusive patterns, it has more commendable features.

It does this more economically than the boiler because even air circulation keeps fuel bill low.

It does this more conveniently than the hot water boiler, because it has no radiators to take up room, congested ducts and mar the paper and woodwork.

It does this more hygienically than the boiler because pure air is admitted to the furnace through a cold air pipe.
